Comprehensive Dataset Structure

The analysis is built on a multi-year dataset providing rich context across various dimensions of our business operations.

→ Scope and Scale

Contains 9,994 transaction rows and 21 detailed columns of multi-year order data.

→ Product Diversity

Covers sales across 3 distinct Product Categories (Technology, Furniture, Office Supplies).

→ Market Segmentation

Analyzed across 3 customer Segments (Consumer, Corporate, Home Office).

→ Geographic Reach

Data spans 4 major Regions and 49 states, detailing geographical performance variance.

The dataset includes critical fields such as sales, profit, discount rates, ship mode, and extensive customer details.

Visualizing Multi-Year Performance

Monthly Sales and Profit Trend Analysis

The monthly trend analysis shows clear seasonality, with sales and profit peaking significantly in the final quarter, particularly in November and December. This trend highlights the importance of holiday-driven strategies.

Profitability by Customer Segment

Understanding segment profitability is crucial for resource allocation. While Consumer delivers the highest profit percentage, tailored strategies are needed to unlock further potential in the Corporate and Home Office segments.

Product Category Performance

Category by Sales and Profit Contributions

Technology

Sales: $836K (Highest)

Profit: $145K

High-ticket items drive revenue, but margin scrutiny is required due to high competitive discounts.

Office Supplies

Sales: $719K

Profit: $122K (Strong Margin)

Consistent volume and lower cost of goods contribute to a robust profit margin, making it a reliable performer.

Furniture

Sales: $742K

Profit: $18K (Lowest)

High revenue but critically low profitability. We must address factors like shipping costs and discount strategy for this category.
